

A Film by Alejandro Furth

At the end of 2007 I was invited to the very first meeting of a group of Venezuelan filmmakers; Venezolanos in Hollywood. As I looked around and realized the many different talents that surrounded me, I knew I no longer had an excuse to postpone my now overdue goal to direct with a camera. So, "La Nochebuena de Paco y Manolo," is the collaborative effort of this group of people who lent their talent and time to create a piece that is permeated by the nostalgia that we feel for a time and place that are no longer there.

SYNOPSIS

Paco and Manolo are two forty-year-old Venezuelan adolescents spending Christmas Eve in a deserted watering hole. Not a great idea...and they know it. They are lonely. They are pouting. They are whining. They are guys! And they are missing every opportunity Christmas has to offer. Will they manage to stop their banter long enough to talk to the two beautiful girls walking in to play some pool?
